LINES WRITTEN IN EARLY SPRING

William Wordsworth

WHAT HAPPENS? A resting speaker enjoys a grove but repeatedly returns to sadness about human conduct.

BIG IDEA Nature's apparent harmony prompts a repeated question about the harm humans do to one another.

FOUR EVIDENCE FRAGMENTS · ZOOM IN, THEN EXPLAIN

"I heard a thousand blended notes,"

Auditory imagery

Different sounds combine without losing their individual existence.

"And much it grieved my heart to think"

Emotional verb

Enjoyment and moral pain exist at the same time.

"Their thoughts I cannot measure:—"

Admission of limitation

The speaker does not claim complete access to the birds' experience.

"What man has made of man?"

Repeated question

Human suffering is presented as something humanity itself has produced.

FORM

Six quatrains with alternating rhyme; the shorter fourth lines repeatedly bring reflection to a point.

CONTEXT

Published in Lyrical Ballads in 1798, the poem connects Romantic attention to nature with an ethical question about humanity.

COMPARE IT WITH…

Shall earth no more inspire thee: different appeals to nature's restorative power. Like an Heiress: pleasure disrupted by human damage.

VOICE, TONE & FEELINGS · FOLLOW THE SHIFTS

Resting and listening

PEACEFUL, THEN TROUBLED

Pleasant surroundings do not prevent sad thoughts from entering the speaker's mind.

Flowers, birds and branches

WONDERING

Small movements are interpreted as signs of pleasure, though the speaker admits limits to knowledge.

Returning question

LAMENTING

The poem finishes by testing human conduct against the speaker's belief in natural harmony.
